42. Most colleges and universities today are struggling with issues related to tensions related to campus security and responsible alcohol or tobacco use and physical safety. Please describe any new programs or policies dealing with these issues.

These issues continue to be a focus for discussion and training sessions during each year's freshman orientation, and various campus groups address them with programming throughout the year. Several new programs and policies regarding alcohol use are either newly implemented or currently under consideration, all with the goal of reducing risky behavior.

43. Do you have any signature academic programs or emphases that potential applicants should know about? If so, please describe and tell us how many students participate.

Kenyon is noted for its emphasis on students' written and oral communication skills across the curriculum. Students in the natural sciences benefit from especially close collaborations with faculty members, both during the academic year and in the competitive Summer Science Scholars Program, in which they conduct research on a project of their own devising with a faculty mentor.

44. What are your strongest academic programs? For what programs are you best known?

English, political science, economics, history, international studies, art, drama, and the natural sciences.

45. Are there ways in which the academic mission of your school is evolving?

We hope we're always evolving as an institution, but we're not currently engaged in any kind of programmatic evolution with regard to our mission.

46. Have you completed any new physical facilities within the past two years? If so, please describe.
